Stressed Out

Life seems to move so fast today that almost everyone feels stressed. The MORI Social Research Centre in London recently analysed the causes and effects of stress on people in Britain. One person in five said he or she experiences stress every day, with serious emotional results. Nearly half of those who have ever felt stressed report having suffered from depression. A quarter of people have felt isolated by stress, and one in eight believes they have nowhere to turn for help.

Two in five people feel their stress levels have increased in the past five years. The main causes of stress were listed as work, money and family. People say they reduce stress by watching TV or listening to music, going for a walk, phoning or visiting a friend, or by having a cup of tea or an alcoholic drink. MORI did face-to-face interviews with nearly 2,000 adults over the age of 15 to produce the study.

Agriculture: Threat to tea

India's tea farmers are losing 30 per cent of their profits, and in some cases their entire crop, to a weed called Mikania micrantha. The plant, which comes from Central and South America, was brought over during the Second World War to make airfields hard to see. Since then, it has spread out of control. "The plant can grow at a phenomenal rate. In the monsoon season, it is like seeing a green tidal wave coming down from the hills," Sean Murphy of CABI Bioscience in Egham, England, told New Scientist. After a seven-year search, Murphy identified rust fungus as a natural enemy of Mikania. His company wants to take the fungus to India later this year, after doing tests to make sure it won't harm other plants in that country.

28. Where does Mikania micrantha come from?

29. What does the word "phenomenal" mean in context to the sentence?

30. What was the reason for growing the weed in the first place?

Mr. Show-off

Tina was sitting in front of the house waiting impatiently for her brother. They were meeting up with two other pairs and wanted to play tennis today, like every Saturday. While she was daydreaming and singing to herself, her neighbour George came over to her looking quite distraught.

"Tina, I really 31. put my foot in it yesterday. I asked Tom how old his daughter was. And it was his wife!"

Tina felt like laughing but by the look of George's expression she thought otherwise and said, 32. "keep your chin up, he'll forget about it in a day or two." She didn't really believe this herself because she knew Tom. He wasn't really a pleasant person. If one was to describe him in a few words it came down to filthy rich, selfish and a Mr-know-it-all kind of guy. His house had 33. cost an arm and a leg and time and time again his wife had 34. put her foot down about his behaviour and told him that he should not give the neighbours an impression that he was Mr. Universe, as she had a feeling that none of them liked him...

He seemed to 35. turn his nose up to everything and this he did with pleasure not realising that he therefore made more foes than friends.
